TAR OCM, (901) 874-4346; TAR Assistant OCM/TAR Aviation OCM: (901) 874-3605

TAR, which was formerly known as FTS, is career active duty in the reserve component. TAR receive active duty pay and benefits leading to eligibility for active duty retirement. TAR officers work in one of eight major officer communities. TAR perform duties in connection with organizing, administering, recruiting, instructing, managing and training the Navy's selected reserve. TAR balance these assignments with operational or major staff tours in their communities.

1167/1117 – Surface Warfare. The TAR SWO career path mirrors the sea-shore rotation of active component surface warfare officers, with the ultimate goal of command at sea. Shore tours are often independent duty in command of reserve centers throughout the United States or assignments to major staffs. The potential to qualify in surface warfare and the opportunity to serve at least as a Department Head afloat are requirements to enter this community.

1207 – Human Resources. The TAR HR community's mission is to deliver HR expertise to define, recruit, develop, assign, and retain a highly-skilled workforce for the Navy Reserve and provide operational capability to the CNR. Expertise is attained through advanced education to include a series of leadership and staff tours in the four primary career core competency areas. Core competencies include Manpower Requirements and Analysis, Recruiting, Training and Education Development, and Personnel Management.
