Recruiting the Sailors and Marines of tomorrow

The Honorable Carlos Del Toro
Secretary of the Navy

The Chief Petty Officer Retirement Creed states, “By law and tradition, U.S. Navy Retirees are always on the rolls, ever ready to lend their service when the need arises.”

Navy and Marine Corps retirees have always stood ready to answer this call, which is why I am confident I can call on your help today, to help recruit the next link in the chain.

Those of us who have served in the fleet carry a lifetime of memories, a full measure of pride, and a vast network of shipmates for life. To ensure the continued strength of our beloved Navy and Marine Corps, we need to reach outside of that network. Each of us has a responsibility to tell our stories and engage the young people of our Nation. Tell them why you served—and why they should serve as well.

There is nothing more inspiring for me than to meet with our newest recruits. I am excited for what lies in front of them. I believe, more strongly than ever, that joining and staying in the Navy and Marine Corps is a great choice for any young person in this country. All who serve are motivated by the desire to become a better person and to contribute to something greater than themselves. There are excellent practical reasons for a young person to choose a life of service as well.

Today’s Sailors and Marines get opportunities to do and see things most Americans never will. They will serve in every part of the world, wearing the cloth of our Nation, responding to the call of humanity with the skills to truly make a difference. Those skills range from practicing life-saving medicine, to air-lifting supplies to people in need, to training the security forces of developing nations defending their own democracy. These skills will serve them well when they transition to civilian life, as will the enduring values that have always come with a life of service, including leadership, discipline, and mental resiliency in the face of adversity.

I know this from my own personal experiences. Our Sailors and Marines receive competitive pay, benefits, and allowances, as they build their future through training and education opportunities. From vocational instruction and certifications, to college credits and advanced degrees at little to no cost to the service members, today’s military offers unprecedented opportunities for personal and professional growth. For our Navy and Marine Corps, education is not just about attracting and retaining quality applicants. It is about creating a force of strategic thinkers and emotionally-intelligent leaders, capable of both winning in combat and fostering a work environment that values collaboration, integrity, and respect. Earlier this year, I established a Task Force to take a hard look at the state of naval education, and we as a Department are in the process of reviewing our observations and recommendations. We have positioned lifelong learning as a major factor in how we determine who will lead our force now and into the future. This commitment to lifelong learning applies to all of our uniformed members, at every level. It is another reason that the Navy and Marine Corps are places of even greater opportunity than when you and I raised our right hands and took the oath of service.

Building tomorrow’s force requires us to continue expanding those opportunities, to meet challenges with the combined talents of the best of all of our Nation. Together, we must recruit, retain, and mentor the finest men and women of every background to continue our sacred mission of national defense. I want every child to envision themselves wearing that uniform someday.

I need your help in this mission. Get out there and help mentor and recruit the finest in your communities. Help mentor those who are serving today. Listen to their concerns and stay involved in their service - and the service of their families. Advocate for their needs, particularly in the critical quality of life issues such as housing, mental health, child care, and spouse employment.

As your Secretary of the Navy, I am committed to doing everything I can to ensure the safety, well-being, and opportunity to thrive for every Sailor and Marine and military family in our fleet and for today.

With the help of our remarkable community of retired Sailors and Marines, we can continue to build an even greater Navy and Marine Corps tomorrow. Thank you for your ongoing service to our Navy, our Marine Corps, and the United States of America.

If you know someone who might qualify, recommend them to the local Navy/Marine Corps recruiters.

The SECNAV Retiree Council recently met to discuss issues facing Navy and Marine Corps retirees. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the council has not met in person since 2020. First row, from left: Master Sgt. Richard Chavez, USAF (attending as an observer); Cmdr. Chris Bowen, USN; Cmdr. Mike Newell, USN; Master Chief Petty Officer of the Navy James Herdt (Co-Chair); USN; Lisa Truesdale, Deputy Assistant SECNAV (Military Manpower and Personnel); Lt. Gen. Kevin Shand, USN; Aaron Wagner, Navy Retired Activities Office.

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The SECNAV Retiree Council met the week of Aug. 14, to discuss issues facing Navy and Marine Corps retirees and their families. The event took place in the Admiral Gooding Center at the Navy Yard, here, with some council members and special guests participating remotely. This was the council’s first in-person meeting since 2019; the most recent plenary session was held virtually in August 2020. In the months leading up to the meeting, council members researched many issues, 15 of which were developed into written documents. During the meeting, the field was further narrowed into 10 issue papers and two special interest items for consideration by SECNAV. Highlights of the 2022 conference included welcome remarks by Lisa Truesdale, Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Navy (Military Manpower and Personnel), and Andrew Corso, Principal Director, Military Manpower and Personnel, Department of the Navy. During the event, special guests presented information on topics ranging from pay to healthcare to post-service transition to ID cards.

The SECNAV Retiree Council holds first large-scale, in-person meeting since pandemic began.

COUNCIL from page 4 to funeral honors and survivor support and benefits. Members of the three council committees – Compensation, Health Affairs, and Overseas/Outreach/Resources – shared information on current and potential initiatives, including service “For Life” programs, state taxation of military retirement pay, base Retired Activities Office and other volunteer opportunities for retirees, and overseas issues.

The SECNAV Retiree Council will meet virtually over the coming months to track the status and take any requested follow-on action on the submitted issue papers. Council members are monitoring the status of the special interest items and identifying new items for further research and possible development into issue papers.

The council plans to hold its next plenary session in August 2023.

“The annual plenary meeting was the culmination of a year’s effort in extensively researching, composing, and vetting more than a dozen issues for SECNAV consideration, said Chief of Staff Martin Menez. “The subject-matter experts invited to address the council added perspective and focus to the efforts. The thought leadership of the council identified areas of needed change, and reflect the known needs of the Navy and Marine Corps retired community of benefits, entitlements, rights, privileges, and changes in retirement law, and provides customer service to military retirees, families, annuitants, and survivors. Retired Activities Offices research questions, provide answers, and refer personnel to appropriate service providers, thus helping retirees and their families obtain the rights, benefits, and privileges to which they’re entitled.

This column addresses questions and issues commonly addressed by RAO Representatives. Because Shift Colors typically publishes in October and April, some of the topics will be more timely than others.

Q: My child is heading off to college. How does this affect my military retiree benefits and entitlements, like TRICARE?

A: First, congratulations on your child’s acceptance and entrance into post-secondary education. It’s important that you and your child know how this affects your child’s status as a military dependent. Other factors also play a role. TRICARE benefits. If your child is enrolled full-time in an accredited college in pursuit of an associate’s degree or higher, and you’re providing more than half of your child’s financial support, your child may be eligible for TRICARE until their 23rd birthday or graduation, whichever comes first. However, continuation of your child’s TRICARE benefits is not automatic — you must ensure that your child’s student status is reflected in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Report System. Your child will likely also need a current dependent ID card.

TRICARE benefits. If your child is enrolled full-time in an accredited college in pursuit of an associate’s degree or higher, and you’re providing more than half of your child’s financial support, your child may be eligible for TRICARE until their 23rd birthday or graduation, whichever comes first. However, continuation of your child’s TRI-CARE benefits is not automatic — you must ensure that your child’s student status is reflected in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Report System. Your child will likely also need a current dependent ID card. Contact the Defense Manpower Data Center for information about eligibility and ID cards: (800) 538-9552 or (TTY/TDD) (866) 363-2833. If your child relocates to attend school, you may want to switch their service branch to their local healthcare provider. Contact TRICARE for more info.

Other retiree benefits. Your child’s student status continues their eligibility to shop at the commissary and exchange. It also means your child can continue to participate in Morale, Welfare and Recreation programs. Your child will need a valid retiree dependent ID card to access these benefits. Depending on location, you or your child may want to take advantage of military lodging options. Check DOD Lodging and Vacation with Military Lodging & Hotels:

Q: As a retiree, what shopping privileges do I have at military exchanges and commissaries? Do my family members have any shopping privileges?

A: Commissary and exchange shopping is a valuable military benefit. Commissaries and exchanges offer quality products at competitive, tax-free prices. Thanks to online options, you don’t need to live close to a military installation to conveniently do some types of shopping.

In the U.S., military retirees and their dependent family members generally have commissary and exchange privileges. However, overseas shopping privileges differ by country. If you’re overseas, determine your commissary and exchange privileges here.

Due to current health and security concerns, access to some installations is restricted. Before you make the trip, check on the installation’s access policy. You and any family members who shop at a commissary or exchange should bring your current, unexpired DOD military or dependent ID card to access the installation and the shopping facility. You can find the phone numbers, addresses, days and hours of operation for commissaries in the U.S. abroad here. If your commissary participates in the CLICK2GO program, you may shop and place your order online up to six days before your scheduled pickup.

Go here to locate an exchange and get address, phone, and business hours information. You can also shop online here. Whether you’re shopping CONUS or OCONUS, you may save even more through the Price Match Policy; get details.

As noted above, you and your dependents will need proper ID to get onto the installation and into the shopping facility. You can find an ID card office and make an appointment here. If you need more help to prevent overpayments.

To begin to close out the pay account to prevent overpayments.

Step 2: Contact your financial institution and inform them of the death of the retiree.

Step 3: Within 7-10 business days of reporting the retiree’s death to DFAS, you should receive a letter of condolence.

Step 4: If the member is due arrears of pay, you will also receive a Claim for Unpaid Compensation of Deceased Member of the Uniformed Service (SF 1174). If the decedent was enrolled in the Survivor Benefit Plan or the Retired Serviceman’s Family Protection Plan, you should also receive an Annuity Care Package.

How to report a Retiree’s death

When a Navy retiree passes, retired pay ends. It is therefore important that survivors promptly report the death to help avoid delays and possible financial hardship to surviving annuitant beneficiaries, family members or executors who will be required to reimburse any pay overpayments.

To report the death of a military retiree, follow these steps:

Step 1: Notify the Defense Finance and Accounting Service Casualty Care Team at (800) 321-1080. You will need to have the retiree’s Social Security Number and the date of death ready when you call.

► For customers located overseas, the commercial number is (216) 522-5955. Select option 3 to be directed to the appropriate representative.

► Upon notification, DFAS will begin to close out the pay account to prevent overpayments.

Step 2: Contact your financial institution and inform them of the death of the retiree.

Step 3: Within 7-10 business days of reporting the retiree’s death to DFAS, you should receive a letter of condolence.

► If the member is due arrears of pay, you will also receive a Claim for Unpaid Compensation of Deceased Member of the Uniformed Service (SF 1174).

► If the decedent was enrolled in the Survivor Benefit Plan or the Retired Serviceman’s Family Protection Plan, you should also receive an Annuity Care Package.

Step 4: Complete the SF 1174 and return it with a copy of the retiree’s Death Certificate. Certificate must reflect the retiree’s cause of death Return these documents to:

DFAS U.S. Military Retired Pay
8899 E 56th Street
Indianapolis, IN 46249-1200

If you need assistance completing your claim form, contact the DFAS call center at (800) 321-1080. You can also contact Navy Retired Activities by calling the Navy Personnel Command Customer Service Center at (800) 827-5672 and asking for extension 4308.

CONTACTS

In addition to DFAS, you should also notify the following agencies as soon as possible:

► Social Security Administration, (800) 772-1213.

► Department of Veterans Affairs, (800) 827-1000 for retirees receiving disability compensation.

► Office of Personnel Management, (888) 767-6738 if the member was a current or retired federal civilian employee.

From Retiree Activities Office

The U.S. Navy’s Retired Activities Branch apprises the military retired community of benefits, entitlements, rights, privileges, and changes in retirement law, and provides customer service to military retirees, families, annuitants, and survivors. Retired Activities Office (RAO) representatives research questions, provide reliable answers, and refer personnel to appropriate service providers, thus helping retirees and their families obtain the rights, benefits, and privileges to which they’re entitled.

Volunteer opportunities exist at several RAOs in CONUS and OCONUS. Check the listing of offices and volunteer opportunities at www.Navy.mil/Retire.

Q: As a retiree, what shopping privileges do I have at military exchanges and commissaries? Do my family members have any shopping privileges?

A. Commissary and exchange shopping is a valuable military benefit. Commissaries and exchanges offer quality products at competitive, tax-free prices. Thanks to online options, you don’t need to live close to a military installation to conveniently do some types of shopping.

In the U.S., military retirees and their dependent family members generally have commissary and exchange privileges. However, overseas shopping privileges differ by country. If you’re overseas, determine your commissary and exchange privileges here.

Due to current health and security concerns, access to some installations is restricted. Before you make the trip, check on the installation’s access policy. You and any family members who shop at a commissary or exchange should bring your current, unexpired DOD military or dependent ID card to access the installation and the shopping facility. You can find the phone numbers, addresses, days and hours of operation for commissaries in the U.S. and abroad here. If your commissary participates in the CLICK2GO program, you may shop and place your order online up to six days before your scheduled pickup. Read the info. Go here to locate an exchange and get address, phone, and business hours information. You can also shop online here. Whether you’re shopping CONUS or OCONUS, you may save even more through the Price Match Policy; get details.

As noted above, you and your dependents will need proper ID to get onto the installation and into the shopping facility. You can find an ID card office and make an appointment here. If you need more help to determine your commissary and exchange privileges, contact your local ID card office directly.

Be sure to bring the necessary documentation to your appointment.

How to report a Retiree’s death

When a Navy retiree passes, retired pay ends. It is therefore important that survivors promptly report the death to help avoid delays and possible financial hardship to surviving annuitant beneficiaries, family members or executors who will be required to reimburse any pay overpayments.

To report the death of a military retiree, follow these steps:

Step 1:

Notify the Defense Finance and Accounting Service Casualty Care Team at (800) 321-1080. You will need to have the retiree’s Social Security Number and the date of death ready when you call.

► For customers located overseas, the commercial number is (216) 522-5955. Select option 3 to be directed to the appropriate representative.

► Upon notification, DFAS will begin to close out the pay account to prevent overpayments.

Step 2:

Contact your financial institution and inform them of the death of the retiree.

Step 3:

Within 7-10 business days of reporting the retiree’s death to DFAS, you should receive a letter of condolence.

► If the member is due arrears of pay, you will also receive a Claim for Unpaid Compensation of Deceased Member of the Uniformed Service (SF 1174).

► If the decedent was enrolled in the Survivor Benefit Plan or the Retired Serviceman’s Family Protection Plan, you should also receive an Annuity Care Package.

Step 4:

Complete the SF 1174 and return it with a copy of the retiree’s Death Certificate. Certificate must reflect the retiree’s cause of death. Return these documents to:

DFAS U.S. Military Retired Pay

Indianapolis, IN 46249-1200

If you need assistance completing your claim form, contact the DFAS call center at (800) 321-1080. You can also contact Navy Retired Activities by calling the Navy Personnel Command Customer Service Center at (800) 827-5672 and asking for extension 4308.

CONTACTS

In addition to DFAS, you should also notify the following agencies as soon as possible:

► Social Security Administration, (800) 772-1213.

Why it’s important: Informing DFAS of life-changing events

From DFAS Cleveland

What can you do as a retiree to ensure your retired pay comes to you accurately and on time? Keep your account up to date.

As a retiree, the sooner you alert DFAS to any change that might affect your pay, the more timely and accurate your pay will be. Keeping your account updated includes making sure your mailing address, email address, banking information, allotments, tax withholding status, and beneficiary choices are current.

Be sure to report any change-of-life events as soon as they happen. These life-changing events might include:

- Moving
- Marriage or Remarriage
- Divorce
- Birth or adoption of a child
- Death of a spouse or child

Some changes, especially those regarding Survivor Benefit Plan coverage, have a one-year time limit, so it is very important that you notify DFAS of life-changing events when they happen. When you notify DFAS, be sure to include photocopies of supporting documents, such as birth or marriage certificates.

If you are making a change to your SBP coverage because of a life event, you can now use the convenient, online askDFAS upload tool on DFAS.mil to submit your DD2656-6 (Survivor Benefit Plan Election Change Certificate) and supporting documents. And when you submit a DD 2656-6, you’ll get email status notifications to the email you provide in askDFAS, or if you send it by postal mail or fax, to the email in your myPay account.

Keeping your contact information updated is key to staying informed. DFAS occasionally sends out correspondence regarding changes in the law that affect your pay. If your mailing address is not correct and you are not on myPay, we have no way of notifying you about changes.

DFAS is also communicating more via email to provide more convenient customer service, so you will be better informed if you have a current email in your myPay account.

The easiest way to keep your account updated is to use myPay. You can use myPay to change your mailing address, your email address, your direct deposit information, some allotments and your tax withholding status. You can also use myPay to verify payment information, including allotment amounts, or tax withholding, or check your Survivor Benefit Plan (SBP) coverage on your RAS.

If you’re not yet using myPay, it’s easy to get started and add your email address for status notifications. We have a handy step-by-step, downloadable “Get Started with myPay” guide available here. DFAS continues to develop helpful tools and information for you, and our website puts it all at your fingertips.

Burn pits, an area devoted to open-air combustion of trash, was a common waste disposal practice at military sites outside the United States from Vietnam to Afghanistan. Smoke from these pits contained substances that may have short- and long-term health effects, especially for those who were exposed for long periods or those more prone to illness such as individuals with pre-existing asthma or other lung or heart conditions.

PACT Act expands burn-pit benefits to veterans

Act adds new presumptive conditions, more presumptive-exposure locations, toxic exposure screening

From Veterans Administration reports

Recently signed into law, the PACT Act expands VA health care and benefits for veterans exposed to burn pits and other toxic substances. This law helps provide generations of veterans — and their survivors — with the care and benefits they’ve earned and deserve.

Perhaps the largest health care and benefit expansion in VA history, the full name of the law is The Sergeant (SFC) Heath Robinson Honoring our Promise to Address Comprehensive Toxics Act.

“Veterans who were exposed to toxic fumes while fighting for our country are American heroes, and they deserve world-class care and benefits for their selfless service,” said VA Secretary Denis McDonough.

“The bipartisan PACT Act will help VA deliver for those veterans — and their survivors — empowering us to presumptively provide care and benefits to vets suffering from more than 20 toxic exposure-related conditions. It will also bring generations of veterans into VA health care, which will improve veteran health outcomes across the board.

The PACT Act will bring these changes:

- Expands and extends eligibility for VA health care for Veterans with toxic exposures and veterans of the Vietnam, Gulf War, and post-9/11 era;
- Adds more than 20 new presumptive conditions for burn pits and other toxic exposures;
- Adds more presumptive-exposure locations for Agent Orange and radiation;
- Requires VA to provide a toxic exposure screening to every Veteran enrolled in VA health care; and
- Helps improve research, staff education, and treatment related to toxic exposures.

If you’re a Veteran or survivor, you can file claims now to apply for PACT Act-related benefits.

Veterans, their families, caregivers, and survivors can apply for benefits by filing a claim. Learn more at VA.gov/PACT or by calling (800) MyV-A411.

“Thank you to all of the veterans, survivors and family members who fought to make this day possible, and thank you to President Biden for keeping our nation’s promise to those who served,” McDonough said. “We at VA will stop at nothing to make sure that every veteran and survivor gets the care and benefits they deserve.”

CNO releases Navigation Plan 2022

This plan builds upon NAVPLAN 2021, further outlining how the U.S. Navy will build, maintain, train, and equip a dominant naval force to strengthen strategic partnerships, deter conflict, and if called upon, help win the Nation’s wars.

“The seas are the lifeblood of our economy, our national security, and our way of life,” said Gilday. “The Navy is committed to accelerating America’s advantage at sea and our success depends on executing this Navigation Plan with teamwork.”

Navigation Plan 2022 aligns Navy’s vision with the most up-to-date strategic guidance, to include the 2022 National Defense Strategy (NDS) and the Secretary of the Navy’s Vision. It outlines how the Navy is uniquely positioned to strengthen integrated deterrence, campaign forward, and build enduring warfighting advantages.

This update also supports these lines of effort by driving a Fleet-wide movement to strengthen Navy’s learning culture and advancing a framework to accelerate its warfighting advantage.

Building on last year’s priorities of Sailors, Readiness, Capabilities, and Capacity, Gilday emphasizes the need to deliver a Navy that is postured globally, combat capable, and partner-focused every day. The new guidance further reiterates Gilday’s ‘Get Real, Get Better’ call to action, reminding leaders they need to consistently self-assess and self-correct in order to create a culture of learning and continuous improvement.

Navigation Plan 2022 introduces six force design imperatives to maintain combat credibility in increasingly contested seas: expand distance, leverage defense, burden defense, increase distribution, ensure delivery, and generate decision advantage. These force design imperatives enable distributed maritime operations, the Navy’s foundational operating concept.

“We must decide decisively to modernize U.S. naval power as we maintain readiness and a forward posture that keeps America and our Allies safe and prosperous,” said Gilday. “The Navy is adopting a more continuous, iterative force design process to focus our modernization efforts and accelerate the capabilities we need to maintain our edge in this critical decade and beyond.

“Seapower forged our nation and, for generations, a strong Navy has guaranteed the rules-based order globally, combat credible, and part of our way of life,” said Gilday. “The Navy is adopting a more continuous, iterative force design process to focus our modernization efforts and accelerate the capabilities we need to maintain our edge in this critical decade and beyond.”

DON announces Office of Force Resiliency

The Department of the Navy recently renamed the Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Office to the Office of Force Resiliency. This change better reflects the expanded role in implementation and oversight of Department-wide prevention and response efforts.

“Force readiness and resilience begin and end with our people,” said Secretary of the Navy Carlos Del Toro. “This rebranding reflects an important modernization in our thinking about the cultural challenges facing our military and is crucial to sustaining an inclusive culture of dignity and respect, intolerant of violence in all its forms. This is an important opportunity to move our service members, their families and DON civilians to the center of our efforts and address these challenges with renewed vigor and emphasis.”

The portfolio grew significantly in the last several years to encompass various components of force preservation and readiness. The office will continue to confront sexual assault and harassment prevention and response, advocate for survivor-centered policies, and promote resilience and suicide prevention through integrated programs, policies, leadership development and oversight activities.

“The DON is making a historic shift from primarily focusing on survivor support to prioritizing prevention of destructive behaviors,” said Andrea N. Goldstein, acting director, DON OFR. “That mission is not going away. In addition, we’re committed to tackling our most pressing cultural challenges, rebuilding institutional trust and setting the conditions for equity, inclusion and Department-wide accountability.”

The offices’ immediate priorities include:

► Improving resilience and readiness of the total force by identifying suicide prevention best practices and initiatives to support department efforts.

► Establishing and integrate primary prevention policies and responsibilities to mitigate self-directed harm and prohibited abusive or harmful acts using a career-cycle perspective to promote enduring force readiness.

► Establishing a public health approach to assessment, selection, and training efforts that promote protective environments, healthy climates, and skill development for healthy relationships.

► Establishing an evidence-informed and evidence-based evaluation framework to assess the efficacy of prevention program interventions.

► Developing leaders and prevention programs that emphasize that our core values should anchor all actions to support a culture of dignity and respect.

Celebrate Vietnam War Veterans, March 29

Join us on 29 March, National Vietnam War Veterans Day, as Americans unite to thank and honor Vietnam veterans and their families for their service and sacrifice. The Vietnam War Veterans Recognition Act of 2017 was signed into law by President Donald Trump, designating every 29 March to celebrate America’s Vietnam War Veterans. This special day joins six other military-centric annual observances codified in Title 4 of the United States Code §6, among them Memorial Day, Independence Day and Veterans Day. March 29 is a fitting choice for a day honoring Vietnam veterans. It was chosen to be observed in perpetuity as March 29, 1973 was the day United States Military Assistance Command, Vietnam was disestablished and also the day the last U.S. combat troops departed Vietnam. In addition, on and around this same day Hanoi released the last of its acknowledged prisoners of war. The United States of America Vietnam War Commemoration honors all veterans who served on active duty in the U.S. Armed Forces at any time from Nov. 1, 1955 to May 15, 1975, regardless of location, and their families. November 1, 1955 was selected to coincide with the official designation of Military Assistance Advisory Group-Vietnam (MAAG-V); May 15, 1975 marks the end of the battle precipitated by the seizure of the SS Mayaguez.

The Department of Veterans Affairs estimates that today there are more than 6 million U.S. Vietnam veterans living in America and abroad, along with 9 million families of those who served during this timeframe. We make no distinction between veterans who served in-country, in-theater, or who were stationed elsewhere during the Vietnam War period. All were called to serve and none could self-determine where they would serve.

American involvement in Vietnam started slowly with an initial deployment of advisors in the early 1950s, grew incrementally through the early 1960s and expanded with the deployment of full combat units in July 1965. The last U.S. personnel were evacuated in April 1975. This national commemoration was authorized by Congress, established under the Secretary of Defense, and launched by the President to thank and honor our Nation’s Vietnam veterans and their families for their service and sacrifice.

In 2007, the 110th Congress incorporated language in House of Representatives (H.R.) 4986 authorizing the secretary of defense to conduct a program commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Vietnam War. H.R. 4986 was signed into law as the National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) for Fiscal Year 2008 by President George W. Bush on Jan. 28, 2008. President Barack Obama officially inaugurated this Commemoration at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington D.C. on Memorial Day, May 28, 2012.

Section 598 (Public Law 110-181) of the 2008 NDAA specifically addresses Commemoration activities. Congress outlined a total of five objectives for The United States of America Vietnam War Commemoration, with the primary objective being to thank and honor Vietnam veterans and their families for their service and sacrifice on behalf of the Nation, with distinct recognition of former prisoners of war and families of those still listed as missing in action.

The four remaining objectives highlight the service of our Armed Forces and support organizations during the war; pay tribute to wartime contributions at home by American citizens; highlight technology, science and medical advances made during the war; and recognize contributions by our Allies. By Presidential Proclamation, the United States of America Vietnam War Commemoration will continue through Veterans Day, Nov. 11, 2025.

Celebrate Vietnam War Veterans, March 29

Join us on 29 March, National Vietnam War Veterans Day, as Americans unite to thank and honor Vietnam veterans and their families for their service and sacrifice.

The Vietnam War Veterans Recognition Act of 2017 was signed into law by President Donald Trump, designating every 29 March to celebrate America’s Vietnam War Veterans. This special day joins six other military-centric annual observances codified in Title 4 of the United States Code §6, among them Memorial Day, Independence Day and Veterans Day.

March 29 is a fitting choice for a day honoring Vietnam veterans. It was chosen to be observed in perpetuity as March 29, 1973 was the day United States Military Assistance Command, Vietnam was disestablished and also the day the last U.S. combat troops departed Vietnam.

In addition, on and around this same day Hanoi released the last of its acknowledged prisoners of war.

The United States of America Vietnam War Commemoration honors all veterans who served on active duty in the U.S. Armed Forces at any time from Nov. 1, 1955 to May 15, 1975, regardless of location, and their families. November 1, 1955 was selected to coincide with the official designation of Military Assistance Advisory Group-Vietnam (MAAG-V); May 15, 1975 marks the end of the battle precipitated by the seizure of the SS Mayaguez.

The Department of Veterans Affairs estimates that today there are more than 6 million U.S. Vietnam veterans living in America and abroad, along with 9 million families of those who served during this timeframe.

We make no distinction between veterans who served in-country, in-theater, or who were stationed elsewhere during the Vietnam War period. All were called to serve and none could self-determine where they would serve.

American involvement in Vietnam started slowly with an initial deployment of advisors in the early 1950s, grew incrementally through the early 1960s and expanded with the deployment of full combat units in July 1965. The last U.S. personnel were evacuated in April 1975.

VA suicide prevention staff face burnout as workload rises, watchdog warns

By Leo Shane III
Military.com

As demand for mental health services and suicide prevention programs increases within Veterans Affairs offices, staffers there may be at risk of exhaustion and burnout if changes aren’t made to better track and manage those employees, an outside watchdog warned Monday.

In a new report, the Government Accountability Office said department leaders have not done a thorough enough review of VA suicide prevention teams’ staffing, workloads and challenges. Without that, they cautioned, leaders do not have enough visibility over operations to ensure new prevention programs are being implemented properly.

“One team said they have experienced burnout and turnover in the team due to the ‘constant delays of new initiatives, combined with their large caseload of high-risk veterans,’” the report stated.

Members of another team told us their team has a caseload of about 150-200 veterans identified as being at risk of suicide every day, according to the latest data released by the department. That number has remained largely unchanged in recent years despite increased attention and funding from lawmakers on the issue.

In response to the report, VA leaders said they are already putting in place plans to better monitor the suicide prevention teams.

“VA is taking steps to ensure staffing data resources are regularly updated at each medical center and monitored monthly at the Veterans Integrated Service Network and program office level,” said VA Secretary Denis McDonough.

Current rules mandate that every VA medical center and larger community-based outpatient clinics have at least one full-time suicide prevention coordinator on staff to ensure mental health needs are being met locally.

But the department does not have set requirements for the number of case workers assigned to those offices, leaving those decisions to local officials. Staffers interviewed by the GAO reported seeing their workloads increase dramatically in recent years, as prevention efforts and mental health referrals have risen.

“Without an accurate understanding of facilities’ needs for suicide prevention staff, VA cannot ensure that all of its facilities are prepared to care for veterans at risk for suicide,” the report states.

VA leaders said improvements will be put in place over the next two years. The department is currently working to implement portions of the Commander John Scott Hannon Veterans Mental Health Care Improvement Act — sweeping suicide prevention legislation approved by Congress last fall — which is expected to include several of the new ideas for improvements.

Olympic fencer begins military medical career

Navy Ensign Eliza Stone, an Olympic fencer, joined the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences (USU) School of Medicine this year.

She brings tenacity and drive and knows a thing or two about working alongside teammates who continually lift up one another, and foresees these skills being essential as she works her way through medical school and embarks on a career as a military physician.

“The whole point of fencing is to win the bout regardless of the opponent or outside circumstances,” she said.

She explained that fencing is not as simple as picking up a saber and taking a swing at one another, as some might think. It’s also similar to medical school in that it requires a lot of training and application of learned skills.

There are also complicated strategies, the study of your opponent’s psyche, and knowing what choices to make.

The bouts become a flurry of moves and counters with mental “traps,” happening in quick succession.

Stone competed on the international fencing circuit, ultimately ranking fourth in the sport. She medaled in the 2018 World Championship, won the 2019 Pan American Games, and made it to the 2020 Olympics in Japan.

“Going to Tokyo was one of the biggest honors of my life because it was the culmination of years and years of hard work,” Stone said.

While she was on the international circuit, a seed grew that had been planted in her childhood. Stone’s grandfathers were doctors in the Army and Navy during World War II, one of whom was at the Pearl Harbor attack.

Her view of her grandfathers resonated with her over the years, and solidified her decision to go to medical school after earning her undergraduate degree.

“In college, I studied political philosophy and the ideas behind how to construct a perfect society, using whatever ideals and experiences you think might be most effective in producing a happy and productive society,” she explained. “But studying that made me think about how I ought to be fitting into the bigger picture. The idea of utility stuck in my mind. When I tried to find out how to be useful, I kept coming back to medicine.”

“The idea of serving my country and taking part in humanitarian missions and supporting communities around the world as a physician especially fit into my idea of being as useful as possible — which once again, is why I chose military medicine.”

‘How would you rate your pain?’

From Health.mil

If you receive care in a military medical treatment facility, you might notice your team is using a new method for assessing pain. The Military Health System is rolling out a new pain management strategy, the Defense and Veterans Pain Rating Scale, or DVPRS. Most people are familiar with the traditional way of assessing pain during a medical appointment. Patients were usually asked to “rate your pain on a scale of 0-10.” While for many years this seemed to make sense, there was growing evidence that both the 0-10 levels of pain so that successful pain management is associated with improved function rather than what Buckenmaier called.

“chasing zero intensity.” The DVPRS also includes an assessment of the patient-reported impact of pain on four specific quality of life indicators: activity, sleep, mood, and stress. This provides clinicians with a deeper understanding of the patient’s pain condition and a better way to measure the progress and effectiveness of pain management treatments.

It was clear from our discussions with patients and clinicians that the standard 0-10 pain assessment needed to be improved, said Dr. Chester Buckenmaier, director of the Defense and Veterans Center for Integrative Pain Management, which is the DoD’s center of excellence for pain management located at the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences.

“We needed a way to expand our pain assessments beyond just looking at pain intensity,” Buckenmaier said. In response to this challenge, a DoD pain management task force developed the DVPRS, which combines several previously validated pain assessment tools with some important additions.

To start, the DVPRS incorporates functional descriptions for each of the 0-10 levels of pain so that successful pain management is associated with improved function rather than what Buckenmaier called.

Majority of U.S. adults: Having dental insurance provides peace of mind

From Delta Dental

Dental insurance continues to support optimal health as highlighted in the recently released 2022 State of America’s Oral Health and Wellness Report, a nationwide analysis of consumer opinions and behaviors relating to oral health.

Findings from the Delta Dental-commissioned research of U.S. adults and parents of children ages 12 and younger also inform how adults who have dental insurance recognize the emotional and financial benefits that come with it.

A few highlights from this year’s report include:

- Almost 9 in 10 (89 percent) adults agree that having dental coverage gives them peace of mind.
- Provides relief from worrying about what they would do in a dental emergency.
- Among those insured, nearly all adults recognize that their dental insurance saves them money (94 percent) and is well worth the cost (91 percent).

In fact, adults (68 percent) and parents (72 percent) appreciated having dental insurance more than ever during the pandemic.

The research also indicates that, due in part to the pandemic, nearly 7 in 10 (69 percent) parents with a child not currently covered by dental insurance will secure coverage in 2022.

“Our survey illuminates the vast emotional and financial benefits most adults and parents across the United States associate with having dental insurance,” said James W. Hutchison, President & CEO, Delta Dental Plans Association.

“Delta Dental continues to partner with oral health professionals and the public in our development of enhanced dental plans focused on person-centered care. The innovative plans are based on a person’s health needs and provide the extra care to enrich overall health and quality of life.”

FTC Report shows rise in sophisticated dark patterns designed to trick and trap consumers

The Federal Trade Commission released a report today showing how companies are increasingly using sophisticated design practices known as “dark patterns” that can trick or manipulate consumers into buying products or services or giving up their privacy.

The dark pattern tactics detailed in the report include disguising ads to look like independent content, making it difficult for consumers to cancel subscriptions or charges, burying key terms or junk fees, and tricking consumers into sharing their data.

The report highlighted the FTC’s efforts to combat the use of dark patterns in the marketplace and reiterated the agency’s commitment to taking action against tactics designed to trick and trap consumers.

“One report shows more and more companies are using digital dark patterns to trick people into buying products and giving away their personal information,” said Samuel Levine, Director of the FTC’s Bureau of Consumer Protection.

“This report— and our cases—send a clear message that these traps will not be tolerated.”

FTC proposes new rule to combat impersonation scams

The Federal Trade Commission has proposed a rule to fight government and business impersonation scams—a perennial scourge that has cost consumers hundreds of millions of dollars over the past five years.

The proposed rule would codify the principle that impersonation scams violate the FTC Act, as do those who provide impersonators with the means to harm consumers.

The proposed rule would expand the FTC’s toolkit in allowing the Commission to recover money from, or seek civil penalties against, scammers who harm consumers in violation of the rule.

The Federal Trade Commission released a report today showing how companies are increasingly using sophisticated design practices known as “dark patterns” that can trick or manipulate consumers into buying products or services or giving up their privacy.

The dark pattern tactics detailed in the report include disguising ads to look like independent content, making it difficult for consumers to cancel subscriptions or charges, burying key terms or junk fees, and tricking consumers into sharing their data.

The report highlighted the FTC’s efforts to combat the use of dark patterns in the marketplace and reiterated the agency’s commitment to taking action against tactics designed to trick and trap consumers.

“Our report shows how more and more companies are using digital dark patterns to trick people into buying products and giving away their personal information,” said Samuel Levine, Director of the FTC’s Bureau of Consumer Protection. “This report—and our cases—send a clear message that these traps will not be tolerated.”

For years, unscrupulous direct-mail and brick-and-mortar retailers have used design tricks and psychological tactics such as pre-checked boxes, hard-to-find-and-read disclosures, and confusing cancellation policies, to get consumers to give up their money or data. As more commerce has moved online, dark patterns have grown in scale and sophistication, allowing companies to develop complex analytical techniques, collect more personal data, and experiment with dark patterns to exploit the most effective ones.

The staff report, which stems from a workshop the FTC held in April 2021, examined how dark patterns can obscure, subvert, or impair consumer choice and decision-making and may violate the law.

The report, Bringing Dark Patterns to Light, found dark patterns used in a variety of industries and contexts, including e-commerce, cookie consent banners, children’s apps, and subscription sales. The report focuses on four common dark pattern tactics:

- Misleading Consumers and Disguising Ads
- Burying key terms and junk fees
- Trick consumers into sharing data
- Making it difficult to cancel subscriptions or charges

These dark patterns are often presented as giving consumers choices about privacy settings or sharing data but are designed to intentionally steer consumers toward the option that gives away the most personal information. The FTC alleged that the online lender used prominent visuals to falsely promise loan applicants that they would receive a specific loan amount and pay “no hidden fees” but hid mention of fees behind tooltip buttons and in between more prominent text.

FTC proposes new rule to combat impersonation scams

The Federal Trade Commission has proposed a rule to combat impersonation scams—a perennial scourge that has cost consumers hundreds of millions of dollars over the past five years.

The proposed rule would codify the principle that impersonation scams violate the FTC Act, as do those who provide impersonators with the means to harm consumers.

The proposed rule would expand the FTC’s toolkit in allowing the Commission to recover money from, or seek civil penalties against, scammers who harm consumers in violation of the rule.

Fraud reports to the FTC about government and business impersonation scams rose sharply at the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic. The FTC received more than 2.5 million reports of these scams from consumers nationwide from the beginning of 2017 through the middle of 2022, a reported loss of more than $2 billion.

These impersonators can take many forms, posing as, for example, a lottery official, a government official or employee, or a representative from a well-known business or charity. Impersonators may also use implicit representations, such as misleading domain names and URLs and “spoofed” contact information, to create an overall net impression of legitimacy. These scams may be fishing for information they can use to commit identity theft or seek monetary payment, often requesting funds via wire transfer, gift cards, or increasingly cryptocurrencies.

The Commission is seeking comment on proposed measures that would fight these scams by declaring various tactics used by scammers unlawful, such as posing as a government or business by name or by implication. For example, the proposed rule would ban scammers from using government seals or business logos when communicating with consumers by mail or online.

Spoofing government and business emails and web addresses, including lookalike email addresses or websites that rely on misspellings of a company’s name or logo, allows scammers to engage in government and business impersonation scams, such as a supplier who manipulates consumer information to commit fraud.

DFAS has helpful tips for Gray Area Retirees

By definition, Gray Area Retirees are members who served in the Guard or Reserves and qualified for retired pay and have retired from their service (stopped drilling), but are not yet at the age where they can start receiving retired pay.

The time between their retirement from the service and the date when they are eligible to begin receiving retired pay is the “gray area,” which applies even if the member is in the Retired Reserve. A Guard or Reserve member is generally not eligible to start receiving retired pay until they reach age 60. However, some periods of active duty or active service can reduce the age requirement below 60 years of age.

The earliest age a Gray Area Retiree can start receiving reduced age retired pay is age 50.

For Army National Guard, Air National Guard, Army Reserve, Navy Reserve, Marine Corps Reserve and Air Force Reserve Gray Area Retirees, there is a new avenue to stay connected and informed between the time they stop drilling and the time they start receiving retired pay.

If you are a Gray Area Retiree who uses your new myPay account to keep your contact information up to date, you will benefit from receiving important information from DFAS and your Branch of Service, such as news about changes in laws or policies that impact your retirement benefits, reminders about applying for reduced age retired pay or are about to apply, we have some Retired Pay Helpful Tips with links to the pay calendar, information about taxes and SBP, the VA Waiver, CRDP, CRSC, and more.

DFAS has helpful tips for Gray Area Retirees

By definition, Gray Area Retirees are members who served in the Guard or Reserves and qualified for retired pay and have retired from their service (stopped drilling), but are not yet at the age where they can start receiving retired pay.

The time between their retirement from the service and the date when they are eligible to begin receiving retired pay is the “gray area,” which applies even if the member is in the Retired Reserve. A Guard or Reserve member is generally not eligible to start receiving retired pay until they reach age 60. However, some periods of active duty or active service can reduce the age requirement below 60 years of age.

The earliest age a Gray Area Retiree can start receiving reduced age retired pay is age 50. For Army National Guard, Air National Guard, Army Reserve, Navy Reserve, Marine Corps Reserve and Air Force Reserve Gray Area Retirees, there is a new avenue to stay connected and informed between the time they stop drilling and the time they start receiving retired pay.

If you are a Gray Area Retiree who uses your new myPay account to keep your contact information up-to-date, you will benefit from receiving important information from DFAS and your Branch of Service, such as news about changes in laws or policies that impact your retirement benefits, reminders about applying for retirement benefits, and more.

Plus, coming soon: with a current email address in your new myPay account, when DFAS receives your completed application for retired pay from your Branch of Service, DFAS will send email status notifications to you. Note: Gray Area Retirees should always work with their Branch of Service to complete their retired pay application. DFAS has a helpful downloadable Gray Area Future Retiree myPay Login Tips PDF with instructions.

It’s important to note that the Gray Area Future Retiree myPay account is NOT the same as a Military Pay, Civilian Pay or Retired Pay myPay account. It is a separate account, although it is accessed with the same login and password as a Military Pay or other type of myPay account.

Depending on status, a Gray Area Retiree could see more than one type of pay account once they are logged in to myPay. Just like when you log in to online banking, you may see the option to view more than type of account: checking, savings, credit card, or mortgage. If you are new to the gray area, once you log in to myPay you could see the option to view your Military Pay account and your Gray Area Future Retiree account.

If you are a civilian employee and a Gray Area Retiree, you could see the option to view your Civilian Pay account and your Gray Area Future Retiree account. And in some cases, you might see both your Gray Area Future Retiree account and your Retired Pay account for a short time. If you have just applied for your military retired pay or are about to apply, we have some Retired Pay Helpful Tips with links to the pay calendar, information about taxes and SBP, the VA Waiver, CRDP, CRSC, and more.
